A Singing Quilt (2008) for mixed choir, percussion and prerecorded speaking voices

The starting point for this piece was a series of interviews I conducted in early 2008 with eleven residents of the New South Wales Southern Highlands. Let me name them in the order in which their voices appear in the piece: Elio Pezzella of Moss Vale, Hank Vandepol of Welby, Anni Heino of Robertson, Owen Conlan of Robertson, Gordon Lewis (at the time, Mayor of Wingecarribee Shire Council), Velma Mulcahy of Welby, Jan Alcock of Mittagong, Jill Chauncey of Moss Vale, Ian Bowie of Bowral, Lily Hepher of Mittagong, and Jessica Lean of Bundanoon. Some of these people were born in the Southern Highlands, some had arrived from other parts of Australia, some from other countries. As much as anything, I was interested in their early memories and first impressions of the place. In A Singing Quilt, we hear short excerpts from these interviews, including, at the very end, the first four speakers returning to describe their new locations in their native languages: Italian, Dutch, Finnish and Irish.

Having edited the interviews, I took some of the words and set them to music. In fact all the words the choir sings come from these interviews. Most of the choral writing in the piece is canonic. That’s to say the singers divide into three, four and frequently six parts to sing the same melodies out of phase, in canons or rounds. This was a way of creating a rich musical texture out of fairly simple material, but it also felt (in my mind, at least) like travelling across an expansive landscape.

The final element in A Singing Quilt is the percussion ensemble: five players playing cymbals, wind-chimes and rain sticks, drums (bongos, congas and tom-toms) and tuned percussion (marimba, vibraphone, tubular bells, Thai gongs and hand bells).

A Singing Quilt was commissioned by Wingecarribee Shire Council with financial assistance from the Regional Arts Fund, an Australian Government initiative supporting the arts in regional and remote Australia. The driving force behind the project was Jenny Kena, the council’s Community and Cultural Development Officer, and the title of the piece was her idea.

Moya Simpson’s Can Belto

Can Belto was formed in 1996 after a series of voice workshops run by Moya. The group has performed mostly world music, but has broken loose recently with a performance of Bohemian Rhapsody, and now Beatles. Can Belto has performed at the National Folk Festival, the War Memorial’s Hall of Memory, and have been involved in many Shortis and Simpson’s theatre projects. They also were the basis of the choir in ‘Emma Celebrazione” and ‘The Universal Lake’ for the Weereewa Festival.

Moya Simpson

Moya Simpson, singer, actor, comedian, leader of voice workshops and choirs, discovered she could sing in 1984. Since then she has carved out a career built upon her extraordinary vocal versatility, comic timing and energetic delivery of whatever she takes on. She’s sung songs of the Balkans in Mesana Salata and Martenitsa, toured for Musica Viva in acappella group Girls In Your Town with Mara Kiek, Jarnie Birmingham and Margret RoadKnight, and trained with British singer and voice specialist Frankie Armstrong to develop her own voice workshop skills.

Moya has worked with the Singing Quilt choir members leading two highly successful singing workshops at Exeter Hall earlier this year.

His compositions have been performed by John Williams, the London Symphony Orchestra, the Royal Scottish National Orchestra, the Australia Ensemble, Slava Grigoryan, Synergy Percussion, the Amsterdam Percussion Ensemble, Trilok Gurtu, the New York Percussion Ensemble, Michael Kieran Harvey, and Australia’s leading orchestras and soloists.

In 2004 Westlake was awarded the HC Coombs Creative Arts Fellowship at the Australian National University.

George Hamilton Green (1893-1970)

George Hamilton Green was born in May 1893 in the USA, into a musical family. He was a piano prodigy by age four, and by the time he was eleven he was already being called “the greatest xylophone player in the world!” He recorded hundreds of solos, and played with many bands. In 1928, George and his brothers Joseph and Lew formed the original sound crew for Walt Disney animations, playing George’s own compositions.

In the 1920s, George Hamilton Green wrote a series of 50 lessons for xylophone and sold them for $1 each. Each lesson is crafted to develop and refine a particular xylophone skill or technique, while teaching the player all of the keys. This book is still universally used by percussionists at all stages in their development, and is generally thought of as the best instruction course for xylophone. The course teaches the xylophonist both general xylophone technique, and also special ragtime technique.

Ragtime is an American style of music which preceded jazz from the late 1800s until about 1920. It is characterised by accents on unusual parts of the beat, which gives a syncopated style. One of the most famous ragtime composers was Scott Joplin, who wrote such famous pieces as ‘The Entertainer’ and ‘Maple Leaf Rag’. Xylophone rags are characterised by fast, virtuosic solo parts.

Nigel Westlake (b. 1958)

Omphalo Centric Lecture (1984) for percussion quartet

The title comes from the painting by Paul Klee, the direct and centred simplicity of which inspired the composer. The piece also owes much to the music of the African balafon (or xylophone), with its persistent ostinati, cross-rhythms and variations on simple melodic fragments. Like African music it seeks, in the words of the composer, "to celebrate life through rhythm, energy and movement". Omphalo Centric Lecture is essentially Westlake's Opus 1. It was chosen to represent Australia at the 1986 Paris Rostrum of Composers and has gone on to become one of the most frequently performed and recorded works in the percussion repertoire by groups in the USA, Japan, Europe and Australia. Originally written for the percussion ensemble Synergy, Omphalo Centric Lecture deals with the basic principles of repeated rhythmic melodic fragments and multi-metrics.

Nigel Westlake's professional career as a clarinettist commenced in 1975 at the age of 17. He has played in fusion bands, soundtrack recording sessions, Australia's leading instrumental groups and as a soloist with orchestras and classical ensembles in Australia and in many cities around the world.

Westlake's film work includes the feature films Babe, Babe – Pig in the City, Children of the Revolution, A Little Bit of Soul, The Nugget, Miss Potter and the Imax films Antarctica, Imagine, The Edge and Solarmax. He has received numerous awards for his compositions including the Gold Medal at the New York International Radio Festival.

Nigel Westlake's conducting debut was with the Queensland Symphony Orchestra in 1997. He has since conducted film scoring sessions and performances in Sydney, Melbourne, Canberra and Tasmania. Last month, he conducted a concert of his music with the Melbourne Symphony Orchestra during the Melbourne International Arts Festival.
